ABSTRACT

A compilation of environmental and energy education resources in Kentucky is provided in this guide. Many of the resource places listed were participants in the annual Kentucky Area Environmental Energy Resource Fair while others were entries which were updated and taken from "A Teacher's Guide to Energy Resources in Kentucky." Section I alphabetically lists the name of each entry in the book. Section II provides the name, address, telephone number, contact person, and a brief description of each resource place listed in the first section. The last section identifies which of these resource places have publications and the name or kind of materials available. (DC)

TVA's Environmental/Energy Education Program maintains that an educated and aware citizenry is key to environmental and energy management. Students are the future decisionmakers and consumers, therefore, represent a major target group that can be reached through the teacher. TVA's program is designed to supplement existing educational programs in cooperation with regional universities that have teacher training responsibilities. Similarly, the citizen and decisionmaker of today, the out-of-school population, is a second major target group. TVA provides or sponsors programs on environmental or energy topics for these groups. In both cases, the ultimate design is to create self-reliance among the citizens based on an awareness, knowledge and skills relating to environmental and energy concerns.
